

5 Steps to Engaging a Patient or Parent Partner

Finding a patient or parent partner to join your QI Team

- Hold a Respectful Care Breakfast and meet potential patient and parent partners.
- Ask clinical team members who work with mothers and newborns to think about prior patients or parents who might want to share their experiences to help improve care.
- Consider opportunities to identify patient and parent partners from diverse perspectives.

• Ask for help from:

OB Providers	Nurses	NICU team	Pediatricians
Social Workers	Doulas	Lactation Consultants

The next step is to reach out and ask

- Ask clinical team members who know a patient or parent best to reach out to ask if they might be interested in being a partner.
- Ask if they want to work with your QI team to be a patient or parent voice and share their perspective to help improve care! Patients appreciate being asked!
 - "Would you be interested in working with our QI team to help us improve care for mothers and families at our hospital?"

Welcome partners to the team- Onboarding!

It's critical that you appropriately onboard your patient or parent partner

- Identify a main contact on your QI team and have them reach out, discuss frequency of meetings and opportunities to connect
- Go over steps that are specific to your hospital onboarding.
- Link patient or parent partners to MoMMA's Voices community and Patient Family Partner training (Scan QR Code).

MoMMA's Voices

QI opportunities to engage your patient partner

- Help develop or give feedback on patient- or parent-facing education
- Assist in planning Respectful Care Breakfasts
- Input on steps for active implementation of respectful care
- Input to improve PREM survey completion & share feedback
- Feedback on process for SDOH screening & linkage to resources
- Input on doula-friendly strategies & improve linkage to doula care
- Participate with Perinatal Mental Health key strategies planning

Make sure partners feel valued and heard

- Determine a regular (monthly or quarterly) meeting time to check-in with your patient or parent partner. Create space to make sure they feel valued and heard.
 - Provide updates on specific projects and share lessons learned
- Invite your patient partner to QI team meetings.
 - Make sure they have a specific contact
 - Ask how they want to contribute – what do they want to work on?
 - Ask for their regular feedback on how it is going – do they feel heard?
- How can you reimburse their valuable time?
 - Payment, meal with meetings, parking, gift bag or other options to show you value their time and expertise

